South Hill Serenity

WRITTEN BY FRANCES BADGETT

PHOTOGRAPHED BY DIANE PADYS

When a family in Bellingham needed to update their South Hill home, interior designer Lisa Staton put together an aesthetic of clean lines and a carefully edited palette that also has depth and warmth through layered materials. The balance between a family home with small children and modern spacious design was an interesting challenge for Staton. Sourcing out of Seattle as well as Bellingham, Staton drew on a number of antique, rug, and other vendors for just the right touches.

The owners wanted both refined fabrics and textures. Staton chose a silk rug and linen fabrics for elegance, shimmer, and durability.

Touches of warm wooden tones add warmth, texture, and intimacy to the dominant sleek, modern aesthetic.
